Scott,

The only additional item that I think we need is documentation on when the sale actually took place. According to information I found online it looks like the sale took place on 12/19/12. I would like to know if it was a complete sale or is he under contract.

I think there are a couple thing you should remind Gregg of:

1. Even though he has no intention of operating the UST he is responsible for the USTs
2. The USTs must remain empty and locked, otherwise he has to start performing release detection
3. A CP test must be conducted every three years, and fix any issues otherwise he may be forced to remove the USTs
4. That you will be by once a year to conduct an inspection, to verify product level and that a CP test was conducted
5. He will need to go through operator training, when passed.

Thanks.

-Mark

Good Afternoon Mark,

I have a compliance assistance visit set up at T and J (Gregg Zimmerman) Thursday July 11, 2013 at 10:00.

I am going to go over CP testing requirements and verify product in each tank (less than 1 inch). Any other items

I should check (i.e dispensers) ?

Scott
